Ruinous Doom Metal

The Berlin-based artist Martin Eder is best known in the art world for his dreamy dark kitsch paintings with kittens, pugs, crows and naked girls. But the multi-talented Eder is also a musician, working under the pseudonym Ruin. In his music, Ruin left the kitsch out and just stuck to dark, and tonight, on the occasion of the Art Forum, Ruin will perform "Half Skull" at Berghain, a work that stemmed from a collaboration with the Kaleidoskop ensemble. Doom and black metal fans will not be disappointed, with special guest Attila Csihar, (Sunn O))), Mayhem) getting on stage with Ruin for that extra touch of dark drone. If you're tired of the artsy parties, this is where you want to be tonight!
